law.

Review the three types of Utah Bankruptcies:

Utah Chapter 7 Bankruptcy

A Chapter 7 bankruptcy is the “clean slate” version of bankruptcy, which does away with all of your debts, but also with all of your assets (barring those which are given an exemption). However, it can be contested by your creditors and declared abusive by the court.

Utah Chapter 11 Bankruptcy

While a Chapter 11 bankruptcy doesn't wipe away your debts, it does make them less burdensome by essentially entering into negotiations with your creditors in order to forgive some or all of a debt, to delay payment, or to lengthen the timetable for repayment. It will hurt your financial standing less than Chapter 7, however, and allow you to remain in business if you're a business owner or partner.

Utah Chapter 13 Bankruptcy

A Chapter 13 bankruptcy is mostly useful for preventing things like foreclosures on your home by having you present a plan for repayment. If your Chapter 7 bankruptcy is declared abusive, you can instead convert it to a Chapter 13.
