Criminal Litigation: Navigating The Process In Utah

What Is Criminal Litigation?

When you or someone you care about gets involved in a criminal case, it's natural to feel overwhelmed. Criminal litigation is a legal proceeding that unfolds when a criminal act is alleged.

Whether you're facing accusations related to misdemeanor or felony crimes, criminal litigation can be daunting and confusing. It encompasses the entire procedure, from the initial accusation up to the final resolution, which might include an acquittal, sentencing, or a settlement.

At Wasatch Defense Lawyers, we believe in empowering you with knowledge and offering the support you need to navigate Utah's intricate criminal litigation process.

Criminal Litigation Process

Understanding the criminal litigation process can help you better navigate these challenging waters. Let's break it down into stages:

- 1. Investigation: Law enforcement officials initiate an investigation based on evidence of a crime. It might involve search warrants, questioning, or surveillance.
- 2. Charging: After the investigation, the prosecutor decides whether to file charges. They'll issue an indictment or information if they believe there's sufficient evidence to prove a crime.

- 3. Initial Hearing/Arraignment: You appear before a judge who formally presents the charges. You enter your plea at this stage.
- 4. Discovery: Both sides, prosecution and defense, share information and evidence before trial.
- 5. Plea Bargaining: Often, cases are resolved by plea bargains, where you may plead guilty to a lesser charge.
- 6. Preliminary Hearing/Trial: A trial is held unless a plea bargain is accepted. The case proceeds to sentencing if the judge or jury finds you guilty.
- 7. Sentencing: Upon conviction, the judge determines the appropriate punishment based on the crime and related factors.
- 8. Appeal: Post-sentencing, you can appeal the conviction if you believe a procedural mistake occurred that affected the outcome of your case.

It's important to note that each case is unique. The process might look slightly different depending on the specifics of your case, which is why having a knowledgeable criminal litigator by your side is invaluable.
