Understanding Revenge Porn

"Revenge porn" refers to the non-consensual sharing of explicit images or videos of a person without their consent. These complex cases require a nuanced understanding of criminal and privacy laws.

Is Revenge Porn a Crime?

Yes. In response to the increasing prevalence of revenge porn incidents, Utah has implemented laws specifically designed to combat this crime. Our attorneys are well-versed in these laws and can guide you through the complexities of your case.

Utah's Revenge Porn Laws

Utah's legal framework has strict provisions in place to guard individuals against revenge porn, often referred to as non-consensual pornography.

In the context of Utah's laws, distributing sexually explicit images or videos of a person without their consent and with the intention of inflicting emotional distress or harm or with the awareness that such distribution will cause distress or harm is classified as a criminal act. The punishment for this crime can vary, with perpetrators potentially facing six months to a year in jail alongside fines between $1,000 and $2,500. For repeat offenders, the consequences escalate, with potential imprisonment of up to five years and fines reaching $5,000. These laws were recently updated in 2021 to address emerging concerns prompted by the tragic case of University of Utah student Lauren McCluskey.

Additionally, individuals affected by revenge porn have the right to file a civil action under federal laws. Such lawsuits can be filed against the person who distributed the explicit material, as well as against the hosting website or company, provided they were informed of the content and failed to remove it promptly.

Civil lawsuits in this context can demand significant monetary compensation for damages such as emotional distress, loss of income, and harm to one's reputation. They can also pursue a permanent injunction to prevent further distribution of the materials. In some instances, victims of revenge porn have received settlements exceeding $150,000.
