Sexual crimes are some of the most serious charges you can face in Utah. Being convicted of a sex crime can result in consequences like a minimum mandatory prison sentence and registering with the Sex and Kidnap Offender Registry for 10 years or for life for more serious sexual crimes. However, there are some surprising ways of becoming a sex offender in Utah that may snag those that have not sexually victimized anyone.

Public Urination

There are thirteen states that require someone convicted of public urination to register with the state sex offender registry, while two states specify the conviction of urination in front of a minor.

Taking and Sending Nude Photos of Yourself

Teens who take and send nude photos of themselves may be charged and convicted with child pornography and be required to register as a sex offender. If the photos are viewed in another state, the charge could escalate to a federal crime.

Under-Aged Consensual Sex

There are twenty-nine states that require under-aged teenagers who have engaged in consensual sex to register as sex offenders, upon sentencing.

Indecent Exposure

A conviction of indecent exposure from flashing your breasts in front of others for personal gratification or the gratification of others is a crime that can land you on the sex offender registry in California.

Sleeping with a Sibling

Sexual contact between family members, also known as incest, is both social taboo and illegal in a lot of states.
